The Forbidden Vine.

Among the things to be avoided, when you stroll into the country, is poison ivy. It clambers luxuriantly over walls and fences and trees and, late in the season, the old glossy leaves, each of which is divided into three lobes, turn to reds, browns and yellows. Its fruit is a small duncolored berry. The flesh that touches it becomes inflamed and swollen and breaks into blisters that are communicated to other parts as the victim rubs them. Some persons are so sensitive to the poison that they cannot go near the lvy without being affected. The ivy is good to look upon, but it is bad to handle.

A couple of years ago there was a project to organize a society to make war on this enemy of the human kind, frain from expressing my great pleasbut it seems to have disappearedperhaps with the disease from which its chief promoter was at the time suffering. In the absence of any organized effort to destroy the poison ivy, it with me." It behooves every individual to look out for his own welfare. The poison lvy is the forbidden vine.-Columbus Dispatch.

Thinks Fish Can Talk.

Stephen Decatur Bridges of Verona, Me., who is known as the "Salmon King" of the Penobscot, is positive not only that fish have brains, but that fish reason and form likes and dislikes, and tell their opinions to each other, the New York World states.

Bridges explains the disappearance of salmon from the Penobscot in two ways -- either "salmon tell other salmons how dirty its waters are and how it is not fit for any respectable salmon to live in," or "the fish resent it because at the hatchway in East Orland they are taken from the water and stripped of their eggs."

WAR CHIEF OF BRITAIN

From segrant to head of the think greatest war in history, this is the record of General Er William Robert-ron, who a few months ago was appointed chief of the general sing at the war office in London and virtual commander in chief of the British est possible position in the British army is unique. There is no other case on proof of a ranker attaining the highest command in the British army, and only one other case in which a ranker even came within measurable distance of it.

Robertson is a genuine ranker, of Scottish descent. He is the son of a farm laborer in Lincolnshire, where he was born fifty-six years ago, and his preliminary education was received at the village school. When he left school he worked in the fields for a time, and a butler in one of the great houses in the neighborhood,

At eighteen the military fever seized him and he enlisted. He chose a crack regiment, the Sixteenth lancers, and he must have made an ideal cavalryman, for even now he is the beau ideal of a dashing soldier, tall, well set up and with an extraordinary firm chin and jaw. He had no one to help him along, and he served in the ranks for ten years, but before long his ambitton was roused, and he probably foresaw that in his case the soldier's knapsack really did contain the field marshal's baton.

He began then the study of languages and of military history, both of which we stood him in such good stead in his subsequent career.

He is much like Kitchener and possesses some of the characteristics displayed by "K. of K." He is a tireless worker, has a mind that works like lightning, dispenses with red tape, is a masterly organizer and will have none but efficient, hard workers under him. Like Kitchener also he can say "No" to a peer or a prince, and if he considers a decision necessary he does not hesitate to announce it. He is a strict disciplinarian, and while greatly admired and of lovely womanhood. I could not re respected for the honors he has won, he is at times feared by the officers.

CLAPP LIKES DAY TRAVEL

Although he does a good deal of traveling over the country, Senator any prejudice against sleeping in one ply because he likes to do so. Not long ago he and a younger man had to go on a trip of 14 hours or more, and the other man naturally proposed that they go on a night train. "Why do you want to go at night?"

asked Clapp, as if the idea of night travel was a brand new wrinkle. "To zve time, of course," replied the man. "one ans to sleep anyhow. Ot'serwise one wastes an entire day." "Waste a day!" exclaimed Clapp.

On a train! What're you talking about? Why, a train's the very place of all places where you den't need to waste your time. You sit in your office and people come in to interrupt you and you can fritter away an hour or two without accomplishing a thing But on a train-there's the place to devote yourself to quiet reflection and think things out. Nearly every good thing I ever did I carefully thought out first while looking out the window of a train. No, indeed, you don't get me to go by night unless I have to. The chance to have a nice long day on the train is too precious to let go by."

So they journeyed by daylight.

"OLD SHACK'S" POSER

Representative Warren Worth Bailey of Johnstown, Pa., is a person with definite views about things. When he favors or opposes a proposition he does so with much earnestness and interseness. For example, he has long been strongly in favor of an adoption of Henry George's single tax ideas, and is equally strong in his opposition tothe president's program for naval and

One night Balley sat in the lobby of the hotel where he lives in Wash-ington talking gravely about the good things in store for this nation just as soon as single tax comes to be generally applied throughout the country. Congressman Dorsey W. Shackle-ford of Missouri was sitting close by. "Old Shack," as he is called, has a sense of humor, though he doesn't look it.

"I would like to ask you just one question," said he to Balley, and Balley bade him go ahead. He was fairly certain that he could refute any argument Shackleford might have against the single-tax doctrine, "What I want to know," propounded Shackleford, "Is this: Why is it that there was never a single case of appendicitis in this country until after Henry George began to talk his single tax' Just answer me that!"

CHINA'S NEW RULER

Gen. Li Huan Hung, who has long been recognized as one of the ablest soldiers in China, is now president of the Oriental republic, having succeeded the late Yuan Shih Kai, and it is believed the change of rulers has put an end to the plans of the Nanking triumvirate and the Peking mandarinate to re-establish the empire. The southern Chinese are solidly behind the new president.

At the same time, there is great anxiety concerning the attitude which Japan will take toward China. General Li spent two years in Japan in the study of military affairs, and he is looked upon as favorable to Japanese influence in China. He is regarded as the representative of the Japanese student element in Chinese politics, as opposed to the American student eleat, which always was very influential under the rule of Yuan Shih Kat.
